How an Artist Treated His Visitor.

To the editor of the Salem (Mass.) Register: I would have accepted your kind invitation to visit you in your new quarters with pleasure before this, had not my old enemy, Rheumatism, pounced on me so suddenly. He arrived last Friday, and, without stopping to send up his card, rushed in and grasped me by the hand with such a grip that in a few hours my hand and wrist were so badly swollen and painful that I felt as though one of Mr. Hatch's coal teams had run over me. Rheumatism has been a constant visitor of mine for several years; always swells and puts on a great many airs and makes himself at home, devouring my substance and leaving me poor in flesh and pocket. Last winter he came and staid two months. I then made up my mind that the next time he came I would change his diet, as he has always gobbled down everything set before him. I was somewhat at a loss what to feed him with, but finally concluded to give him three square meals a day of St. Jacobs Oil—morning, noon and night. This fare he is disgusted with, and is packing up his trunk and will leave by to-morrow or next day; says he cannot stop any longer as he has pressing business elsewhere. He is a treacherous fellow, and I have no doubt he intends visiting some of our Salem friends; if he does just give him the same fare that I did and he won't stop long. J. S. LEFAVOUR

THE CHINESE BILL.

Five speeches were delivered in the House of Representatives on the Chinese bill yesterday. Four by Republicans, all in favor of its passage, and the fifth by a prominent Southern Democrat, who opposed it on every imaginable ground, in an eloquent speech, which echoed, almost to the letter, all the humanitarian and commercial arguments that have hitherto fallen from the lips of the delegation from Massachusetts. The principal argument by which McClure of Ohio, and Bayne of Scranton, Pennsylvania, justified their advocacy of the bill, is the propriety and necessity of affording protection to free American labor. Each of these gentlemen represents a manufacturing district. Butterworth of Ohio, also, made an effective argument, and neatly illustrated his position by declaring himself in favor of protecting American labor from the Chinese, whether in San Francisco or in Canton, but he went further, and with great clearness demonstrated that the bill, so far from being contrary to the spirit of our institutions, is really based upon their fundamental principles and dictated by considerations of highest philanthropy. Although Butterworth expressed his preference for a reaction of the term of suspension to 15 years, and Scranton similarly favored a 10-years' amendment. Neither of them gave reason to doubt that he will eventually vote for the passage of the bill in its present shape, therefore four more Republican votes may now be safely counted on that were previously considered more or less uncertain. Colonel Hooker's speech—although he somewhat inconsistently intimated that he might vote for a 10-years' suspension—was, on the whole, the most pronounced pro-Chinese argument that has ever been heard in Congress. It astonished his fellow members, and gave rise to much conjecture as to its real motives, until that portion was delivered in which he so warmly eulogized the African. Then it began to look as if the eloquent ex-Confederate were angling for the support of colored voters of his District for re-election to the House of Representatives, and, beyond that, for the support of the colored members of the Mississippi Legislature when the time shall arrive for Hooker to enter the list as a candidate for election to the United States Senate in place of Senator George, whose recent utterances about African citizenship have inspired an alarm among the colored people of the entire South. This explanation of Hooker's speech, although rather cynical, found a very general acceptance, and very possibly may account for it.

An interesting article by Chas. S. Bryant in Popular Science bases the question of patriarchal longevity on concrete numerals used in the Old Testament. Accordingly, the ages would read as follows: Adam, 139 years, and not 930 years; Seth, 129 years, and not 912 years; Enos, 114 years, and not 905 years; Cainan, 119 years, and not 910 years; Mahalalel, 129 years, and not 895; Jared, 117 years, and not 962 years; Enoch, 114 years, and not 865 years; Methuselah, 134 years, and not 969 years; Lamech, 117 years, and not 777 years; Noah, 159 years, and not 950 years.

Beneath most of the villages in the coal regions of Pennsylvania are caverns made by the process of mining. "Sooner or later," the Philadelphia Times predicts, "some of these towns will suffer from caving in. The mines depend upon artificial and in some cases exceedingly flimsy contrivances to keep them open and the surface in place. As the timbers decay or become displaced it is only reasonable to expect that a collapse will follow."

Carson is to have a Government benefit. The bill appropriating one hundred thousand dollars for a Government building at that place, has passed the Senate, and will without doubt pass the House.

POLYGAMY IN NEVADA.

The Edmunds bill will soon become a law and our State Government will be called upon to administer the strong arm of law on several hundred Mormons who reside in the different counties in Nevada, bordering on the Utah line, and who only recognize the mandates of the polygamous church of Salt Lake City as their spiritual and political rulers. In view of the near elections in Nevada, the Ogden Pilot says: "Our neighbors of the Silver State do not wish to have the politics of their Commonwealth subject to the dictation of Utah polygamists, who would recommend that they take such steps as are necessary to remove the possibility of such an occurrence. Their Legislature meets next January, and the passage of some such measure as the Edmunds bill, with such changes as would adapt it to the requirements of circumstances, would, doubtless, effect the desired purpose of preventing the possibility of such a bestial and treasonable element again dictating the election result in the State."

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The April number of the California (illustrated) is just to hand. The contents are interesting and meritorious. "Yachting in San Francisco Bay," is a good article, with very creditable illustrations. The other contributions are of equal interest. "The Higher Utilities of Science," by Prof. Joseph LeConte; "A Notable Escape," by James O'Meara; "49," a poem by Joaquin Miller; "The London Newspaper," by Wm. H. Rideing, and other matter of great merit. In all it is a good number.

Petroleum wells have been discovered near Poirie, in Hanover, Germany, where the ground of the oil territory sold as high as $1,000 per acre. Nearly 66,000,000 gallons raw and refined oil was imported last year into Germany from America. It is now feared that the German oil dealers will undersell before long the American importation.

A correspondent sends the following riddle to the Loudon Truth: "My first two syllables are what Gladstone loves (Re-form). My two last are what he hates (a tory). My whole, if pronounced separately, is what he would like to do (Re-form-a-tory). My whole, if pronounced properly, is where he ought to be (Reformatory)."

The will of the late Sarah Burr, who died in New York lately, leaving an estate valued at several million dollars, which is donated entirely to charitable uses, was filed in Surrogate's office on the 14th instant. Among her bequeathes she sets aside $10,000 for the building of a female seminary in this State.

Assessments on thirty mining companies, amounting in all to $778,100, will fall delinquent this month. Of this amount the Nevada mines want $619,100, California $135,000, Arizona $90,000, Mexico $30,000, and Utah $4,000.

Cadet Whittaker.

WASHINGTON, March 21.

The record of the court-martial case of Cadet Whittaker will be made public to day through special orders of the Secretary of War. These orders set aside the verdict and sentence of the court-martial in taking evidence, and will release Whittaker from arrest. At the same time they will dismiss him from the Military Academy on the provision of Section 1325 of the Revised Statutes, relating to discharged cadets found deficient in studies. The action of the President in the case is based upon the opinion by Attorney-General Brewster, to whom the Secretary of War referred the report of the Judge Advocate General, that improper evidence had been admitted in the Whittaker trial.

Murder in Chicago.

CHICAGO, March 21.

An Inter-Ocean special from Sumner, Illinois, says Thomas Davis, of Petty township, aged 65, died to-day from a fracture of the skull, produced by bricks thrown by Captain E. C. Davis, a veteran of the war. The latter is held in $2,500 bail. Both men are well-known and respectable. Captain Davis married a niece of Speaker Keifer.

TO-DAY'S NEWS

Press Dispatches to RENO EVENING GAZETTE.

EASTERN.

Congressional House.
 WASHINGTON, March 22.

In reply to a question by Cox (New York), Page of California stated he would call the previous question on the Chinese bill to-day at 3 o'clock. McClure, who was the first speaker, ridiculed the idea of sentimentalists who looked upon this country as a vast menagerie or great ethnological animal show, in which all races of men were mixed and unmixed, pure and mongrel, Christian and Pagan, civilized and barbarous, warlike and unwarlike, monogamous and white and yellow lived together in harmony. He proposed to discuss the question—not from a lofty pinnacle of aerial sentimentalism, but from an unpoetic standpoint of common sense, and the first question to be settled, was whether the United States had a right to suspend Chinese immigration, as contemplated in the pending bill. He argued that not only did it have the right, but that that right was guaranteed by the terms of the treaty. It was claimed by the opponents of the measure that, should Chinese immigration be suspended, civilization on the Pacific would stand still, her material growth would be arrested; locomotives would cease to scream on her plains; grapes, peach and apricot would wither on the stem; the Grizzly bear, descending from his mountain home, would prey upon the unprotected flocks and people of the Pacific States; great mass meetings would be pouncing at the doors of Congress, headed by an ex-member by the name of Page, demanding in thunder tones a repeal of this un-American, un-Christian, inhuman and diabolical Act. [Laughter.] He then contended, in a more serious vein, that the passage of the bill was demanded as a matter of expediency, asserting that nothing could be gained, but everything lost by a continuation of immigration of such a non-assimilating and conservative race as the Chinese. The Chinaman of twenty centuries ago was unquestionably the Chinaman of to-day. The Pacific States were liable at any moment to numerous, and therefore dangerous, eruptions of the Mongolians. The Chinaman was iron-clad to the genius of our institutions. He was the same unadulterated Mongolian on the banks of the Sacramento as at Yohong; the same Pagan after twenty years residence under the shadow of the Joss House at Nankin. His national character, his physical life, his very vices, enabled him to underbid and drive out white labor, by unequal and injurious competition. The conduct of the people of the Pacific States has been mainly, and their patience admirable; but the danger was, that should Congress disregard the expostulation of these States, the headstrong element, despairing of national success, giving full vent to their passions, might undertake to redress its own grievances, in its own way. He thought that that was the real danger that impended in the future race. Collisions were co-eval with race diversities. In conclusion he asserted that the Republican party was committed to the principle of this bill. The freedom of labor should now turn its back on its old battle flag, its old war-cry and its platform as a mere clap-net, and be recreant to his high trust. He, as a protectionist, as a Republican, stood by the white labor of the Pacific States, against the dishonorable competition of Chinese labor, and he could vote for the bill with a clear conscience. [Applause.]

Bayne (Pennsylvania) argued that the bill was not in violation of treaty stipulations, and favored its passage as a protection to American labor. He quoted from statistics to show that in many fields of labor the Chinese on the Pacific coast had obtained almost exclusive control, and asserted that such a state of facts was a constant menace to the peace and happiness of the country, and could only tend to corruption and decay. It being a just and necessary measure, and consistent with the treaty, he should vote for it, and he believed that the American people would justify those who took that course.

Scranton (Pa.), while favoring the bill, shaped his argument in support of reducing the time of suspension of immigration to ten years.

Butterworth (Ohio) commented on the evils flowing from unrestrained Chinese immigration, asserting that both the Republican and Democratic parties in convention assembled, had declared against it. James A. Garfield, voicing the best thoughts of his time, voicing the humanity of the country, voicing its religion and philanthropy, had declared this immigration was an evil.

Morse (Mass.) suggested (set to vote) that Garfield had dodged the vote on the Fifteen Passenger bill.

Butterworth—My friend is mistaken. James A. Garfield did not know how to dodge anything. [Applause.] Six years before, he entertained the same sentiment. Of course it did not occur to you, with your political associations, that it was possible for a man so to vote as to regard stipulations of a treaty between his country and another. Confronting with his argument Butterworth denied the assertion made by the opponents of the bill, that it was contrary to the spirit of our institutions of this age, and of Christian civilization. Never, down to this hour had he been tempted to cast his vote for any measure that would deny to any human being the rights, privileges, and immunities which he claimed for himself, and yet he gave his heart and his vote to this measure, believing that it was in the cause of philanthropy and in the interest of practical Christianity. He did not want the epitaph to be written over the grave of this republic, "Here lies a great and good, generous people, who lost their own freedom by attempting to give labor to all the world." In a sermon on the Mount, it has been said, "With one blood hath He created all nations of this earth," but it was said, as well, "and he fired the bounds of their habitations," and he begged that the United States would observe the bounds fixed for the habitation of the Chinese. So far as the well-being of the country would be benefited by it, the Chinese could not assimilate with our people. Not on account of any law of the statute-book, but on account of the law traced by the finger of the Divine. No statute law could prevent our people from assimilating with the Scotch, Irish and German, but it were as well to be seen to mix oil and water, as ask our people to assimilate with a degraded people. He was in favor of protecting American labor from the Chinese, whether in San Francisco or Canton. His Democratic brethren were satisfied if competition were removed from San Francisco, but what if millions of Chinese should locate on the Canada border or in Cuba, and there open their shops, manufacture cigars and shoes, and manufacture them so cheaply as to take bread out of the mouths of American laborers. It was not in the Democratic creed to so practice or to protect American labor from that kind of competition. The Republican party protected it, when it was brought into competition with degraded labor. Anywhere and everywhere Chinese labor was degraded to the last degree. The gentleman from Ohio (Taylor) had declared that they were industrious. So were locusts, but they left waste in their trail. The Chinese left more waste in theirs. He argued that any attempt to assimilate with the Chinese would have the effect of dragging Caucasians to their level. If our Government tottered to its fall it would not be for want of material. The Government was not founded upon the wealth of its mines, or fertility of its soil, but it rested upon the moral nature of the citizens, and upon the firm and determined adherence to the fixed rules of right and justice, and he was opposed to any influence that tended to corrupt the moral nature of our people. He was unwilling to open the Golden Gate to a horde of worse than physical lepers, moral lepers, and to make the young Republic the pest-house and penal colony of the world. He would like to support such amendments as would make the bill accord more fully with the treaty, and he thought that a reduction of the term of suspension to 15 years would render it less objectionable, and keep it within the spirit and letter of the treaty, and would not go beyond, but he would rid his people of a pest, in order that the sources of their strength and happiness might be compassed about and defended. [Applause.]

An Appeal for Aid.

WASHINGTON, March 22.

The wife of Sergeant Mason appeals for aid for herself and distressed family, and the release of her husband. She says for eighteen years her husband has been a brave soldier, never in the guard-house before, and that he carries honorable wounds. She thinks he has been punished enough by six months imprisonment.

A Modification Recommended.

WASHINGTON, March 21.

Judge-Advocate General Swain, it is understood, recommends the modification in the sentence of Sergeant Mason upon the ground that Guitau was not in a position where he could possibly have been killed by Mason, and that under such circumstances the charge of assault with intent to kill cannot be sustained.

Mail Matters.

Boston, March 21.

Postmaster-General Howe, in a conference to-day with merchants and others, regarding mail transportation, promised to give attention to their complaint that the Australian mail, bound east, was delayed by stoppage at Chicago. He expected to save 24 hours time in the service between New York and San Francisco.

WESTERN TELEGRAMS.

The Karp Party Making Trouble.

Tucson, March 21.

A Star's special from Tombstone says: The Karp party arrived in Tombstone at one o'clock P. M. and went to the Cosmopolitan Hotel. They stayed there until seven o'clock this evening, when Sheriff Behan went to arrest them. They drew their guns on him and, walking out of town, mounted their horses and left for the Hills. The feeling here in regard to the assassination of Stillwell is growing more intense hourly. The deceased was here in response to a subpoena from the Court. It is now generally believed that the bandits came down from Tombstone for the purpose of killing Ike Clanton, who has been here for two weeks to-day. After the hearing before the coroner's jury a warrant was placed in the hands of Sheriff Paul for the arrest of the Karp party, Holliday, McMahers and other implicated parties. Learning that they had returned to, and arrived at Tombstone, this afternoon Paul telegraphed Sheriff Behan at Tombstone to arrest the parties. To-night Sheriff Behan telegraphed Paul that he had tried to make the arrest and was forcibly resisted by the party and a posse of their friends, and asked for assistance; and that the Karp party had fled to the hills. Sheriff Paul left to-night on a special for Tombstone, to make the arrests. There is no doubt but that he will take them, but bloodshed is expected.

The Dakota Railroad Accident.

Bismarck, Dakota, March 21.

The latest particulars regarding the Sweet Briar railroad accident is to the effect that nine men were instantly killed and eleven others injured. The cars caught fire, and two men were burned. The accident happened two miles east of Sweet Briar, where the road crosses Hart river. Four bents of the bridge gave way. Only the work train was wrecked. Jack Simon, in charge of the snow plow, which was ahead of the wrecked train, is now en route to Mandan, with the killed and injured on board.

More Cabinet Rumors.
